Successful psychological service occurs when the client defines goals to work towards and utilizes the resources of the therapist to achieve these goals. In order for the therapeutic process to be effective, it is necessary for the client to regularly keep appointments, be open and honest, and follow through with suggestions and recommendations made by the therapist.

Communication between the client and the therapist is privileged and confidential. The Pennsylvania Bureau of Professional and Occupational Affairs and the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act (HIPAA) regulate the privacy of your health care information. The specifics are described in the Notice of Privacy Practices provided to you at the time you sign this form. Occasionally, effective psychotherapy requires the psychotherapist to consult with other health care professionals, law enforcement authorities, businesses, or some other third party in order to obtain payment or to coordinate care. The only information communicated will be that which the third party absolutely needs to know.

The client is reminded that professional services are rendered and charged to the client. If insurance pays a portion of the fee, the client may be responsible for co-payments or deductibles. The client should understand that The Stern Center for Developmental and Behavioral Health will bill you for policies or insurance plans that you have for these services and by signing this you give consent to do such billing.

The client should understand that there may be a fee if he or she repeatedly fails to keep appointments or establishes a pattern of canceling appointments less than 24 hours in advance.
